In a retrospective study of 206 patients with colorectal carcinoma with lymph node metastases diagnosed histopathologically, the results of the assessment of survival time showed that the tumor size is a risk factor in the patient prognosis. For patients with metastatic lymph nodes of 1 cm in diameter or larger, the overall 5-year survival rate was 13%. The recurrence-free survival rate after excision of the primary tumor was 37%. For the majority of the patients with 1 cm or smaller metastatic lymph nodes, in about 2/3 of the cases the 5-year survival rate was 35% and the recurrence-free survival rate 61%. Tumor diameter and the size of metastatic lymph nodes are therefore significant factors in the prognosis of colorectal carcinomas and provide an independent prognostic factor for patients with lymph nodes metastases. On the basis of this study, all carcinomas with a maximum diameter of 2 cm or larger should be further examined by additional biopsy after complete resection of the primary tumor.Recovery from post-stroke apathy by means of a virtual reality-based rehabilitation training: a proof of concept study. Stroke is among the most prevalent cause of disability in adult patients and cognitive impairments are often experienced as a critical outcome of stroke. One of the most common and disabling cognitive impairment is apathy, which appears particularly susceptible to change. This study tested whether Virtual Reality (VR) training, specifically developed to address apathy, could improve functional status and health-related quality of life (HRQL) in a population of chronic stroke survivors with post-stroke apathy. In this proof of concept study, 40 chronic stroke survivors with post-stroke apathy were treated either with VR (n = 20) or with a control intervention (n = 20).
